Any anomalies will be reported. However, most gemstones undergo some form of treatment, many of which are acceptable trade practices. Only those treatments deemed unacceptable (under international CIBJO regulations, to which NZ is a signatory) will be noted.

We do not remove any diamonds/ gemstones from their settings, so unless reported, we can only estimate their weights by calculation.

Watches:

We generally do not open the backs of watches, as this can damage seals and void any warranty the watch may have. Therefore, authenticity is checked by the following methods:

1. Visually - comparing quality of finish, measurements and weights against known models.
2. We use Watch Certification Services of America, which compares model number and serial number against known counterfeits.
3. Metal analysis - using XRF to determine the case/ bracelet alloys against a database of known models.

Whilst all care is taken to check the genuineness of any watch, the ultimate authority for deeming a watch as genuine is the manufacturer. In no way does this valuation report guarantee authenticity.
